

Danielle

Hailing from the great state of Pennsylvania, Danielle has been living the good the life in the DC area for three years. You might not guess by looking at the pint-sized lady, but her Tetris skills are unmatched by any other child of the 90's. Even after 25 years life, this girl who spent her awkward middle school years as a competitive swimmer has never swam in the ocean. Her 2012 resolution is to finally do it! Danielle made the move below the Mason Dixon line for a career in Arts Management. She works in education for a performing arts organization and spends her days bringing artists into classrooms in the DMV. This summer you will find Danielle at Jazz in the Garden, the Summerland Concert at Wolf Trap, and Nationals' Park catching fly balls. If there were a movie made about this rambunctious life, the only person Danielle would approve play herself is Tina Fey.
